

Delegates of the Disarmament Commission,

Established by the United Nations in 1952, the Disarmament Commission provides a platform for member states to examine conflict, limit the use of weapons and strengthen mutual trust amongst the nations. The disarmament commission serves as a forum dedicated to the pursuit of peace and global security through reduction of weapons and arms controls as they both threaten international stability. It remains a cornerstone of the UN as it handles and tackles issues whose outcomes shape security and safety for our globe. The topics discussed in this commission reflect the urgency to balance national interests as well as the shared responsibility of disarmament.

The DC is unique on its focus towards cooperation rather than enforcement. Delegates are expected to come up with resolutions that present practical and logical frameworks for disarmament. A key aspect that we aim to promote, and foster is the transparency and dialogue among member states. These solutions must be both practical and visionary providing a foundation that can contribute to UN policies and inspire the guidance of long-lasting international agreements.

This year's AMMUN theme "Deliberate to Liberate" aligns closely with the commission's objectives and principles. Disarmament requires careful negotiation and collective action, and similarly, this theme underscores the importance of thoughtful, inclusive debate to protect societies from the risks of rising armament and war. As you create resolutions, note that every clause should aim to liberate future generations from fear and instability caused by unmonitored use of weapons.

Due to the fact that AMMUN is a THIMUN affiliated conference, high standards are expected from delegates. With that being said, it is important that you research and read about the topics, understand your country's stance, and be ready to participate in well-structured debate adhering to the Rules of Procedure. Approach discussions with an open mind, respect, diplomacy, and creativity as you work together to transform deliberation into meaningful outcomes. The chairing panel is ready to guide you through this process and support you in creating resolutions that mirror the purpose of the Disarmament Commission.
