Delegates of the Economic and Social Council,

The Economic and Social Council holds a unique role as it's one of the six principal organs of the United Nations and promotes global economic, social and sustainable development. It addresses issues like global trade, employment, social rights and sustainability. ECOSOC comprises 54 member states elected by the UN general assembly for 3-year terms and works with over 3,200 non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and agencies affiliated with the UN such as UNICEF, WHO, and UNESCO. This year's topics will examine dependency natural gas exports, the role of the artificial intelligence in the workforce and the food and water scarcity in the Sahara are also worked on.

ECOSOC is distinctive because it's the only committee allowed to discuss finance. Delegates must ensure their resolutions are realistic by identifying sources of funding. For example, ECOSOC searches for funding to bring a project to life, which might be to bring vocational training camp, improve schools or help build more facilities. This project requires funding to become realistic so funding must be discussed.

ECOSOC strongly reflects this year's AMMUN theme, "Moderating Morality", since it pushes towards a future where people are given their rights and necessities by providing different facilities and resources, therefore all people are given an equal opportunity at a better life.

As AMMUN is a THIMUN affiliate conference, delegates are given significant responsibility and expected to meet high standards. Delegates are expected to use the AMMUN conference to discuss different ideas, develop their teamwork skills and create with realistic and effective solutions. Delegates are encouraged to come up with their own distinct ideas, collaborate with overs and combine perspectives, participate in debate as much as possible by delivering speeches, writing amendments and asking questions. Most importantly, delegates must respect one another and treat everyone with kindness. This helps maintain the unity of AMMUN and allows for productive debate. Finally, we would like to request each delegate attending this year's AMMUN conference to familiarize themselves with the debate guide. Please do not hesitate to contact any member of the ECOSOC chairing panel if you have any questions or need further information as our team will always be of assistance whether it's before, during, or after the conference.
