Experts of the Advisory Panel,

The Advisory Panel (AP) was established as a highly specialised, solution-oriented committee intended to provide expert-level advice and technical analysis to the Security Council. The AP relies heavily on collaboration and gives experts a platform to apply their extensive knowledge to a crucial global issue, developing meaningful resolutions and debating amongst themselves to create an effective resolution.

The AP is the only committee in which a single topic is explored from economic, humanitarian, and social perspectives. As a result of conducting comprehensive research, they bring a multi-faceted perspective to debates; hence, participants are viewed as experts rather than delegates. Furthermore, AP is one of two committees, along with the Security Council, that follows an ad hoc debate structure, which is a unique debate structure where there is no need to request follow-ups, and experts can ask questions continuously until the chairing panel stops them. The combination of expert knowledge and the ad hoc debate lead to passionate and engaging debates.

The conference's theme is "Moderating Morality", which requires us to look past superficial political stances and to examine the fundamental ethics driving global policy. For the AP, this means analysing the complex ethical dilemmas behind international crises. It urges experts to look beyond the political status quo to draft impactful resolutions, to keep an open mind during debates, and to have productive discussions.

As a THIMUN-affiliated conference, AMMUN sets high expectations in terms of quality of research, quality of work, and debate. Experts are expected to be familiar with the topic, found on the AMMUN website, before the conference to ensure understanding of the topic, leading to productive debates. AMMUN provides experts with an exceptional platform to debate and find solutions for essential issues that affect our world today, shaping a better tomorrow.
